Vaporetto/boats

In a city with canals in place of roads, it only makes sense that public transportation consists of watercraft. Known as the vaporetti, Venice's water bus system is the city's major form of public transportation. These buses (vaporetto is singular, vaporetti is plural) take visitors along the main canals, to the outer islands, and around the lagoon. Although often crowded, they are by far the least expensive way to get around (other than walking). If you're visiting Venice, sooner or later, you'll find yourself on a vaporetto.

The word vaporetto means "little steamer" after the city's original system of steam-powered motorboats. Today, these famously punctual vessels run on diesel and are wide and flat to ensure the best views from their bows. Smaller, faster versions are called motoscafi, while double-decker boats, or motonavi, are used to ferry riders to outlying islands and to the Lido.

Vaporetto Tickets & Fares

Vaporetto tickets are one price, regardless of the length of the journey. If you want to save money, purchasing flexible travel passes is highly recommended.

- Fares: A 75-minute ticket costs 7.50 euros and entitles you to unlimited travel during that period, starting at the validation time. If you plan to use vaporetti a lot, it makes sense to buy a 1-day (20 euros), 2-day (30 euros), or 3-day (40 euros) pass. Weekly passes cost 60 euros each. These budget-friendly tickets allow optimum flexibility and ease of use. Holders of the Rolling Venice Discount Card for youth (ages 6-29) can purchase a 3-day package for 28 euros. Children under six years ride free. Discounts are also available for seniors (65+).
- How to Buy: You can purchase tickets online or at ticket offices located at Piazzale Roma, Ferrovia, Rialto, and San Marco. You can also buy them at tobacco shops (tabacchi), newsstands (edicole), or wherever the ACTV logo is displayed.

- How to Use: Validate your pass by "swiping or tapping" them on machines located at the boarding entrance. Failure to do so could result in a hefty fine. The price includes one piece of luggage not exceeding 150 cm (50 in)—the total of its three dimensions.
